Photography Walk and Soup Program Offered June 6 at Adkins Arboretum

Capture stunning images of spring and enjoy a tasty and healthy lunch when Adkins Arboretum offers a Photography Walk and Soup program on Sat., June 6. Bring your camera and join photographer Josh Taylor for a morning walk along the Arboretum's woodland and meadow paths. During the walk, Taylor will assist participants and give pointers on capturing landscapes and close-up images.

Following the walk, participants will be treated to the Arboretum's signature Soup 'n Walk fare of zucchini apple soup, green bean salad with mango dressing, apple date wheat bread with cherry jam, and berry cobbler. During lunch, Taylor will give a brief talk and share his photographs from a variety of nearby gardens.

Taylor has presented photography workshops at the Smithsonian National Orchid Show, the U.S. National Arboretum, the U.S. Botanic Garden, and for public gardens, preserves and horticultural societies across the region. In addition to teaching in the Smithsonian Studio Arts Program and at the Corcoran School of Art and Design, he exhibits his work regularly and speaks to camera and garden clubs.

Photography Walk and Soup runs from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The program is $55 for members and $60 for non-members. Advance registration is required by May 28 at adkinsarboretum.org or by calling 410.634.2847, ext. 0.
